South American Independence.

The animated debate which took place in the House of Representatives on the Expatriation Bill; derived additional interest from a declaration of Mr. Speaker CLAY, that he should, in the course of the present session, bring the cause of the South American patriots before the House in a manner worthy of the subject; who pledged himself, on that occasion to redeem them from aspersions, particularly the calumni ous reproaches of ignerance, of superstition, and unfitness for self government, which he said had been cast on them from various quarters. Mr. FORSYTH, chairman of the committee of Foreign Relations, expressed his satisfaction at the intimation thus made by the Speaker; and pledged himself, when the occasion arrived, to defend the policy, pursued by the United States. in regard to the contest in South America.—Nat. Intel.

From the New-Brunswick Times.

SINGULAR OCCURRENCE.

About sixty years ago, the inhabitants of the Island of Rhode-Island, had their attention attracted by the appearance of a square rigged vessel, under full sail, comming in from sea, from a southeasterly direction, with the apparent intention of putting into Naraganset Bay. The vessel was seen early in the morning, at a great distance. As she came near the Island, about 11, A. M. a number of the inhabitants were gathered together on the shore to ascertain her name and character. But instead of making good harbour, the vessel came under full sail directly on shore. No persons were seen on deck, nor had any person, from the time the vessel hove in sight, been seen to leave her.—Some of the inhabitants from the shore went immediately on board : whento their great surprise & astonishment, they found a tea kettle over the fire in the cabin, the fire burning, the table set for breakfast, as if for a number of hands, and yet not one of the crew on board; nor was one soul of them ever after heard of. No living creature was found in the vessel, except a slut and her litter of puppies. The boat of the vessel was missing. The truth of the above story cannot with propriety be doubted. The writer of this had his information from a gentleman, who had the particulars of the history of a Mr. Lawton, a man of unquestionable veracity, who, being then a boy, saw the vessel come in, and went on board of her. Mr. Lawton lives on the Island. Other persons also testify the same thing. The place, moreover, where the vessel was run aground, has from this circumstance ever since been called The Wreck. The vessel belonged to owners in Newport. Papers and writings were found in regular order. —Query, what became of the crew.

From the New-York Daily Advertiser.

LITERARY NOTICE.

"ROB ROY."—We have had an opportunity hastily to look over this long expected and singular work; and we can truly say it is a very entertaining production. That it is uniformly as much so as the story of "Old Mortality," in "Tales of my Landlord, may, perhaps, be doubted. But, take it together, it will not discredit the genius and talent of the unknown author. Many things are admirable; some not inferior to the higher wrought passages in the most elevated Epic Poems. For strength, accuracy, and fire of description, we consider this extraordinary novelist to be unrivalled in this department of literature. There is, also, in Rob Roy, a good portion of that singular humor and characteristic description, which is no where so well attained as in the Scottish dialect.

We give the following account of the execution, by the order of Rob Roy's wife, of a man who had been left as a hostage for his safety, after intelligence had reached her that he had been taken prisoner by the royal troops under the duke of Argyle.

"It is" impossible to describe the scorn, the loathing and contempt, with which the wife of M'Gregor (Rob Roy) regarded this wretched petitioner for the poor boon of existence.

"I could bid you live," said she, "had life been to you the same weary and wasting burthen that it is to me—that it is to every noble and generous mind.—But you —wretch! you could creep through the world unaffected by its various disgraces, its ineffable miseries, its constantly accumulating masses of crime and sorrow—you could live and enjoy yourself, while the noble minded are betrayed—while nameless and birthless villains tread on the neck of the brave and the long descended—you could enjoy yourself, like a butcher dog in the shambles, battening on garbage, while the slaughter of the brave went on around you! This enjoyment you shall not live to partake of; you shall die, base dog, and that before yon cloud has passed over the sun."

"She gave a brief command in Gælic to her attendants, two of whom seized upon the prostrate suppliant, and hurried him to the brink of a cliff which overhung the flood. He set up the most piercing and dreadful cries that fear ever uttered—I may well term them dreadful, for they haunted my sleep for years afterwards. As the murderers, or executioners, call them as you will, dragged him along, he recognized me even in that moment of horror, and exclaimed, in the last articulate words, I ever heard him utter,,' "O Mr. Osbaldistone, save me! save me!

"I was so much moved by this horrid spectacle, that, although in a momentary expectation of sharing his fate, I did attempt to speak in his behalf, but, as might be expected, my interference was sternly disregarded. The victim was held fast by some, while others, binding a large heavy stone in a plaid tied it round his neck, & others again eagerly stripped him of part of his dress. Half naked & thus manacled, they hurried him into the lake, there about twelve feet deep, drowning his last death shriek with a loud halloo of vindictive triumph, above which, however, the yell of mortal agony was distinctly heard.—The heavy burthen plashed in the dark blue waters of the lake, and the Highlanders, with their pole-axes and swords, watched an instant to guard, lest extricating himself from the load to which he was attached, he might have struggled to regain the shore. But the knot had been securely bound; the victim sunk without effort; the waters which his fall had disturbed, settled calmly over him, and the unit of that life for which he had pleaded so strongly was forever withdrawn from the sum of human existence."

OF THE BLACK CURRANT.

The small shrub which produces this fruit is very well worth the farmer's notice, and perhaps may prove of greater importance than has yet been known. It is a native of England, and is hardy enough to live any where in hedges. It must not be considered as a proper shrub to make the fence; but it may very well be planted here and there among the rest, for the sake of fruit. We were long acquainted with the use of these in tarts, before Mr. Baker, a very worthy member of the Royal Society, revived their use in sore throats; for which they were formerly so famous in England, that the shrub was called squinancy wort, that is, quincy herb; and for which we do not at this time know a greater medicine. It has been long known in France that this fruit is good for the feverish disposition of cattle; and that when a purging comes on with such an illness, it is a sovereign remedy. Instinct directs cattle to find it where it is native; and if it were planted in hedges they would not fail to seek it out for their own benefit. The terrible disease among the horned cattle, which has raged so many years throughout a great part of Europe, always is attended with an inflammation of the throat, which continues through the whole intestinal canal. From what we know of the effects of this fruit in sore throats among our own species, and in the purgings and feverish illness of cattle, may it not be reasonable to expect great good from it in this terrible disorder?

Boston Intel.

FROM LATE ENGLISH PAPERS.

LONDON, Dec. 25—31.

The Pope—the French Coronation.—It must be a matter of surprise to the Nations of Europe, that the Coronation of the King of France has not yet taken place. The cause remains to be explained. The circumstance is accounted for in various ways. Report, however, seems confirmed that the Pope refused to crown Louis XVIII. King of France as long as Bonaparte lives. We know that the Pope did refuse, and that it was talked of offering the Country of Avignon to purchase his compliance. As it rests with France, and we hear no more of the King's Coronation, we suppose that nothing can be done with the Pope to induce his Holiness to perform the ceremony.

Power of Magnetism.—The curious in natural history may be gratified to hear that Mr. Sanderson, Lapidary, in Hunter-square, Edinburgh, some time ago received from Russia a piece of loadstone, weighing 125 1-2lbs. It was mounted in iron as a magnet, and, from its uncommon size, promised great power; upon trial, however, it was found incapable of supporting a weight of two ounces, and it was thrown aside, for a considerable time, as a piece of useless lumber. He at length was induced to remove the old mounting, and have its place supplied with one of copper. The experiment has fully answered every expectation. It is now suspended in a handsome frame, in his ware room, supporting the astonishing weight of 160 lbs. & its power daily increasing. Thus, the story of Mahomet's coffin being suspended by a loadstone (hitherto considered fabulous) is no wise inconsistent with the power of this singular and important product of nature.

An official despatch has been received from Oran, dated the 26th of last month, by which it appears that the plague continues to desolate Bona and Constantine, and it still rages in Algiers where the number of deaths amount to 30 a day. We are particularly sorry to add, tha the dreadful disease has spread to the towns of Blida, Media and Mina, and the last within 25 leagues only of Oran, no fewer than 10 individuals being daily carried off in each of those places. In consequence of this unpleasant intelligence, and the malady being expected shortly to extend to Oran (if even it does not already exist there) the measures of precaution will be enforced with encreased rigor in this port.

The dispatch further confirms the intelligence of the Dey of Algiers having withdrawn to the citadel of Caspa, and ascribes this determination to the many plots framed by the Jannissaries against his life. The Dey has also dismissed the Turkish soldiers who composed his guard, and black troops are now doing duty about his person.

About a month before the date of the dispatch, the Bey of Oran had been strangled, the second in command thrown into confinement, and all the principal officers changed. The new Bey, a Turk of the name of Cassan, arrived at Oran from Algiers on the 6th of December with a retinue of about 3000 persons—Twele of his soldiers had died of the plague on the road.

The Algerine squadron which had gone to sea on the 28th of September with the plague on board, returned to Algeirs on the 19th of November, and the ships were immediately laid up.

Execution of Charles the First.

The memorable event, which has been described with much eloquence by our Historians is thus recorded in a newspaper of that period, called "The Modern Intelligencer," without comment, and on the same type with the common news of the day:

"On the 30th of January, was Charles
"King of England, Scotland, France and
"Ireland, put to death, by beheading, over
"against the Banqueting-House, of White-
"hall."

The Newspaper from which the above extract is copied verbatim, is printed in a small quarto half-sheet, and in some of the numbers, the proceedings of Parliament are shortly mentioned under the head of "A perfect diurnal of some passages in Parliament."

The Chinese Aloe is a large tree, in shape like an Olive, which is furnished with three singular barks; the outer one called Eaglewood, is black and heavy; the second is brown and very [illegible] has also the properties of a [illegible] when burnt in the fire has an agree[illegible]; the third bark at the heart of [illegible] is used as a cordial in fainting fits, an[illegible]r perfuming cloths and apartments: this wood is also so precious among the Chinese that jewels are frequently set in it. When incisions are made in its bark a cooling liquid flows from it, which, when kept long enough, makes good vinegar: the branches, when eaten, are said to have the flavour of candid citron: the sharp points which rise upon the branches, are used by the Indians for darts and nails: its leaves serve as a covering for their houses, and when dried, are shaped into dishes and plates: ropes are made of the roots, and the fibres of the leaves are manufactured into thread.

NEGOTIATION WITH SPAIN.

The following sentiment was expressed Lord Chatham in his celebrated speech 1770, on the subject of Spanish affairs.

"The noble Lord talks of Spanish punc- s in the lofty style and idiom of a Span- d. We are to be wonderfully tender of Spanish point of honour, as if they had ived the injury. I think he would have e better to have told us what care has n taken of the English honour. My rds, I am well acquainted with the char- er of that nation, at least as far as it is presented by their court and ministry.— e Spaniards are as mean and crafty as y are proud and insolent. The integri- of the English merchant, the generous rit of our naval and military officers uld be degraded by a comparison with ir merchants or officers. With their nisters, I have often been obliged to nego- e, and never met with an instance of dor or dignity in their proceedings; no- g but low cunning, trick and artifice.— er a long experience of their want of d faith, I found myself compelled to k to them in a peremptory, decisive lan- ge.

THE EXPATRIATION BILL,

Which had occupied the attention of the ouse of Representatives of the United ates for several days, and had been con- derably amended, was again before the ouse on the 4th inst. when the question s taken on ordering the bill to be engros- d for a third reading, and decided in the gative—Ayes 64—Noes 75.—So the bill as finally rejected.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

The trial of the Lancaster Judges was commence at Harrisburgh, on Tuesday t, before the Senate.

The subject of taxing the U. S. Bank s been referred to the next Legislature. Nothing has as yet been done for the rnpike companies, and it is to be appre- nded that nothing will be done—so uch is the legislature engaged with the dge-breaking and Militia business.

The Pennsylvania branch bank at Wash- gton, has been made an independent nk, to be called the Franklin Bank of Washington.

We have not heard that any day is yet ed upon for the adjournment of the le- slature. They will probably sit till the d.

A Philadelphia paper contains a letter ted at Harrisburgh on the 3d inst. which states "There has been sad doings here. The day before yesterday there was an af- y between one or two members and me citizens about removing the govern- ent.—Yesterday a murder was commit- ed—and last night a senator's desk was obed.!"

A tall black man, about 30 years of age, is now going about the country, occasionally preaching as a member of the Baptist Society and collecting money under pretence of its being for the purpose of colonizing the blacks. He has heretofore declared himself a son-in-law of the late Paul Cuffee, and was last heard of in Rahway, where he shewed a subscription paper, purporting to have been signed by (among othe s) Elias Hicks and Thomas Hazard; which names having been forged, the public are cautioned against his fraudulent designs. Editors of newspapers would promote the public good by giving this an insersion.—Mer. Adv.

EDUCATION OF THE POOR.

We announce with heartfelt pleasure, the enaction of a law by the Legislature of Pennsylvania, providing for the Education of Poor Children within the City and County of Philadelphia, on the Lancasterian Plan. This important and benevolent measure owes its origin to the interesting report of the "Committee on Public Schools," some weeks since published in our paper. The labours of that Committee are deservedly crowned with success. (its highest reward,) and we conceive the occasion a fit one, for public congratulation

PATENT HARVESTER.

The model of a Machine to cut, thresh and clean wheat, rye, oats, barley, &c. at one operation, is now exhibiting at the Tontine CoffeeHouse, by the inventor, and has attracted the attention of many gentlemen of science, and practical agriculturists, all of whom we understand express the highest opinion of its merits. The machine is constructed to be moved by the strength of one horse—enters a field of wheat, rye, &c. will take "a two men's land ahead," and cut thresh and fan the grain fit for the mill or market, and without waste or leaving any thing behind to be gleaned. This complete operation can be performed as fast as a horse can walk. The machine may be separated and used only for cutting and gathering the grain, which will render it extremely simple and effective. It is calculated that two horses and one man to attend them, will cut and gather the grain from twenty-five acres per day. The neat cost of a machine for cutting and gathering the grain will not exceed one hundred dollars; and a machine complete, for performing the whole operation of preparing the grain for the mill, about double that sum.

Among the gentlemen who have examined the machine, we name Doctor Mitchill, Mr. C. R. Livingston, Mr. Thomas Freeborn, Mr. Isaac Denniston, the Mayor, &c. Should a Board of Agriculture be established in this state, agreeably to the recommendation of the Governor, it is hoped this admirable invention will be one of the first objects of its attention.

CURRACOA, Feb. 14.

Letters from La Guayra mention, that official accounts had been received there from Spain, stating that 18,000 Russian troops had arrived at Cadiz, and were to embark immediately to take possession of the Floridas, Spain having ceded that country to Russia. What will England and America say to this—the hopes of both nations being thus frustrated.

The House of Representatives has taken up the subject of Internal Improvement, and that with a degree of earnestness that will ensure it an ample discussion. How it will be disposed of, we are yet at a loss to conjecture. On Saturday we had an interesting debate between Mr. Barbour, of Va. who opposed the measure, and Mr. Clay, who advocated it.—*Nat. ---

Our readers no doubt will recollect a story which has gone the rounds in the English papers, (and as a matter of course those in this country,) relative to young Cliffton, the fortunate youth who had su a vast estate left him by an old strang that kings and princes were his debtors. We find a long account in the New-York Gazette, which we regret our limits will not allow us to copy, developing a system of deception and imposition, which a head, full ripened with years and knowledge, might have attempted in vain. Cliffton has fled to Paris, and taken with him a chaise and four: he is loaded with letters of introduction, and if reports of his frauds should not precede him, will no doubt practice among the natives there. He certainly is a youth of surprising talents, but an unfeeling and unnatural child to make his parents and friends the dupes of his artifice.

A BROKER WANTED.

The National Intelligencer contains a serious article inviting a broker to establish himself in that city. It says that for want of such a person, visitors and others there who happen to have bills not so convenient or not so well esteemed or known as the District Bills, are put to great inconvenience from having no individual to apply to, as most cities have, who will for a suitable discount change their bills—and for want of such a person are now often necessitated to send their uncurrent bills to Baltimore, &c.

SUPERB HORSES.

In publishing the following extract of a letter from a gentleman of Virginia, we hope, we commit no trespass upon the sanctity of private correspondence. It is so completely original, but not quite so unique, that most of our readers will be amused with it. Virginians are proverbial for their attachment to fine horses; and it has even been insinuated, that they love these animals better than their wives: But with this question we have nothing to do, at present. The respectable writer of this letter, if the extract should ever reach his eyes, may be assured, that no disrespect is intended by its publication. The vocabulary of Carver, James, or any other veterinarian, could not afford so precise and particular a description of this valuable animal.

"Virginia, Feb. 20, 1818.

"DEAR SIR,

"I have not been able to procure a pair of carriage horses, and have therefore to avail myself of your offer to send me a superb pair from Philadelphia, taking care that they conform to the following description. They must be large and strong, of lofty stature, and bodies long and round:—not lank and with too much day-light under their bellies:—they must be true to the draught and free from tricks; and with these qualities, they must be highly active and sprightly, and highly elegant both in form and carriage. Take care to avoid thick legs and clumsy looking hoofs:—thighs large, of boldly swelling muscles, and gracefully turned, with small legs and hoofs, are what I prefer. Long and finely formed necks and heads; a high and proud carriage of the head and tail; matched in spirit and in quickness of steps.—In short, I wish none but a first rate pair of carriage horses—They must not be over seven years old * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *.

As to colour I prefer either a blood bay or a bright bay, without any white about them; though if they have the other qualities above mentioned, I should not stand upon a white hoof, or a star or blaze in the face, provided they match in these particulars. * * * * * * * * * * * Next to bays I should prefer iron greys. * * * * * * * Next to this colour, dark chesnut sorrel. * * Then black or silver greys. * * * * The last three are not favourite colours with me; yet if the more important qualities can be found only in those three latter colours, I will not stand on colour.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

I do not know whether you have ever seen Com. D———'s silver greys; if you have, they are in form and motion, (tho' not in colour,) precisely such horses as I wish:—* * * * * * * * *.

As to price I will give a liberal one for such horses as I want.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Don't look for the qualities I have mentioned in a heavy louch of a wagon horse. I want fellows of fire and spirit, with a light, airy, lofty step; yet well broke, not easily frightened, and free from every vicious trick.—* * * * * * *.

I beg you to exert yourself on this occasion, and oblige your friend.
